1. On Monday, October 6th, the first running of the new integrated JOT Program began with 56 JOT's, all men, attending. A few others will enter the course within the next week or so. On the preceding Wednesday, a wives' briefing was held not only for the wives of the new JOT's but also others. A total of 34 women were present. On the preceding Friday, the JOT's themselves were formally introduced to the Director of Training, the Director of Central Intelligence, and the Inspector General who addressed them in that order. They were also formally greeted by the Deputy Director of Support. These events constitute another and very important advance in the development of the JOT Program, characterized by the fact that, for the first time, the combined resources of the Office of Training are being focused on the development and evolution of the Program. Thus far, the Program has progressed smoothly.

B. NORMAL ACTIVITIES

DDCI

1. [ ] has submitted a proposal from the Marine Corps which suggests the development of a JOT/ROTC Program. This is being analyzed and will be forwarded to the DTR with recommendations in due course. [ ] has also indicated that the Air Force wishes to discuss with the JOTP staff the methods which are employed in the recruitment and selection of JOT's. The Air Force has been greatly impressed by the quality of JOT's at Lackland Air Force Base. It is understood that a formal request for a meeting on this subject will be forthcoming.

C. PERSONNEL NOTES

Nothing to report.

D. TROUBLESOME MATTERS

1. Seventeen members of the new class have not yet been assessed, largely because they have not been on board a sufficiently long time. Accordingly, it will be necessary to carry out assessments on the next ~~three~~<sup>four</sup> Saturdays with individual interviews scheduled on later Saturdays. Since there will also be a small group of later arrivals who will be handled in the same manner, C/JOTP will recommend that these individuals be paid overtime on the grounds that normally testing and assessment are conducted during the regular work hours.
